Artwork made by:

Daniela EVANGELISTI

After having graduated in Pedagogy, Ms Evangelisti has dedicated herself to teaching. Since a long time she has a great interest for fabrics, hand woven raw hemp, and modern and antique lace. She has been collecting these tissues for a very long time; until she started creating her “Re-toiles ou les toiles recyclées”. With this artwork the artist intends to give back an identity and a value to artifacts made by female hands in the past.

In the space of the hemp canvas her work mirrors her personal conception of space in a balance of solids and voids.

Artwork made by

Annarita SERRA

Sardinian-born Annarita Serra moved to Milan when she was a child. This gave her the opportunity to attend art school there later. In the Eighties she began a career as a manager for a large company, touring all over the world. In 1990, she decided to change paths and to return to her first love: art. Having explored a more traditional pictorial language, she finds her roots in a quest to give a new identity to recycled materials, with particular attention to the plastic collected on the beaches of her native Sardinia. She focuses on the use of fragmented objects, reaching an aesthetic commitment and intense energy.

Antonio JANNACCI

After having pursued classical studies, Mr Jannacci graduated at the University of Modena and Reggio Emilia in law. Next to his professional career as a jurist he devoted himself to activities beyond its civil, criminal and administrative law practice: sculpture and painting, his two great passions.

He loves working with plastic, in particular with PET bottles, which he considers and defines as the noblest of synthetic materials.

Paola MIRAI

Paola Morai is a contemporary jewelry designer, artisan and artist; living and working in Milan. After 20 years as an Art Director in mass communications, she has decided to start a new career, searching for a new ideal of beauty in contemporary mythology, in archaic symbols and particularly in special harmony created when East meets West. After five years of experimentation and research she is now mainly working with a lightweight material called "Orotrasparente", like a contemporary alchemist inspired by the future. Ms Mirai has exhibited her creations in various galleries and expos all over the world. Recently she participated in the Fuorisalone 2014 with an exhibition at the Milan Triennale in Milan Bookshop.

Artwork made by

Sabrina ROMANO'

She is an architect who has always dedicated herself to painting, making it become part of her profession. She initially devoted herself to the techniques of engraving, fresco and watercolor; thus distorting her way of creating by developing the concept of "recycling becomes art." The wise use of waste materials gives her creations a very personal interpretation. She has exhibited in solo and group exhibitions throughout Italy.
